WELCOME TO WOODRIDGE CENTER!

On this historic date of the birth of the first president of the United States of America, we're celebrating another historic birth -- that of Woodridge Center!

George Washington was one of the country's largest landholders in his day. Today, Woodridge Center is one of the largest residential developments in Illinois. And, just as George Washington took pride in Mt. Vernon, Rossmoor has taken pride in planning and producing Woodridge Center.

WHAT TO SEE AT WOODRIDGE CENTER ...

THE FURNISHED MODELS

Twelve in all, one less than the number of original states which Washington governed. Each home has its own unique style, personality and design with something to suit everyone's taste. Of special interest today is the Lucy Standish House, one of the Homestead-Manorhomes furnished in red, white and blue with an early American flair. Furnishings of this style existed in Washington's time.

THE LAKES

If you're looking for a river to toss a silver dollar across, you won't find the Potomac, but you'll have a superb view of Woodridge Center's two lakes from the Village IV Clubhouse. Go ahead and toss that dollar if you're ambitious!

THE JACUZZI

For indoor water lovers, don't miss seeing the Jacuzzi whirlpool -- reached through the locker rooms on the lower level of this clubhouse.

THE EXERCISE ROOM

When America was born, the fashion for women was to wear corsets to keep the waistline trim and the figure just right. Fashions have changed, and today's women are fortunate to have other modern methods of keeping trim. At the Village IV Clubhouse there is an exercise gymnasium with Universal Exercise equipment to help every woman where corsets and bustles used to help! Men are welcome, too.

THE GAME ROOM

During Revolutionary times in America, pool was a popular sport in many Virginia taverns. The game has grown in popularity today, so Rossmoor has devoted a room to it in the Village IV Clubhouse to uphold the tradition of the classic indoor sport.

THE FIREPLACE

In early American history, the fireplace and candlelight were sources of light for reading and entertaining and everything else for which we rely upon electricity today. But today's fireplace is a luxury for leisurely entertaining and enjoyment. The magnificent see-through fireplace and conversation pit in the Village IV Clubhouse is indeed the spot for relaxation and good conversation for residents and guests alike.
